At Nos. 25 and 27 Fourteenth stre TERMS OF DAILY.

TERMS OF WEEKLY.

FREW, CAMPBELL & HART, Wheeling, W. Va. Entered at the Postoffice at Whoeling, W. Va.,

a mere suggestion of the Attorney General's opinion in the case of General Lawton, that decision was approved in these columns. A newspaper does not like to make a mistake of judgment, and in the practice of the skillful there is more than one way of recovering position. The Intelligence prefers to admit plumply the error and get on the right track without circumlocution or shambling evasiences. In view of the full opinion of the Attorney-General, now before us, his position seems to be entirely untenable and in eems to be entirely untenable and in fact is weakened by his own argument. Carried to its logical limit the position of the Attorney-General is that the people the Attorney-General is that the people cannot amend their Constitution, or if they do a previous act of the executive know I am perfectly fascinated with the given by the President:

No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof; but Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

Lawton having been an officer of the army of the United States before the war, and then having served in the Confederacy, the Attorney-General admits that goods. "You're right, he is," said the old man this constitutional amendment would apply to Lawton if it had not been for the earlier action of the President in his favor. Upon this the Attorney-General says:

eenth Amendment to take away righ which previous pardons had restored; o in other words, whether it was the pu pose of that amendment to cast a reproac pose of that amendment to cast a reproach upon the executive department of the Government by repudiating, as unworthy of credit, its acts of unquestionable validity, by destroying rights which had undoubtedly rested under those acts and by violating the national faith solemaly pledged. It cannot be denied that the amendment is as comprehensive as language could make it, but at the same time it must be remembered that the words of every law are to be taken in subordination to its intent, and that where they are general their sense will be restricted if necessary to prevent an unjust or absurd consequence, which it must be presumed the Legislature could not have contemplated.

something were done in the nature of an antidote, it was probable that the executive places, and certainly a number of works seats in Congress, would be filled by men who had scarcely had time to exchange their Confederate uniforms for the dress of civilians. It was exactly "the intention of the Fourteenth Amendment" to render this impossible unless Congress, for reasons which should be sufficient to twothirds of its members, should open the doors. If the intent is what the Attorney-General is looking for, he will find it in the closely written history of the time. The "unjust or absurd consequence" is in the Attorney Generals interprets tion. President Johnson understood the tion. President Johnson understood the meaning of the amendment—knew what it was intended to accomplish and why the people of the loyal States approved it. Again the Attorney-General says: "It is not to be supposed that Congress intended by the general language of the Act to ensure the supposed that Congress intended by the general language of the Act to ensure the supposed that Congress intended by the general language of the congress intended by the general language of the congress intended by the general language of the latter than the supposed in t croach upon any of the prerogatives of the Now we see what has worst President." ed so good a lawyer as Mr. Garland has been thought to be. He is talking about an Act of Congress! What stands in Mr. Lawton's way is the Constitution of the United States! If we bear in mind the essential difference between the two things we see why the Attorney-General might be right if he were dealing with an Act of Congress, and why he is wrong since he is dealing with the Constitution. The people, through the Constitution. The people, through their Constitution, may do what they please. This is when they return to undamental principles and gave a new turn to their organic law.

There are very few men whose disabilities have not been removed by Congress. their Constitution, may do what they please. This is when they return t fundamental principles and gave a new turn to their organic law.

When you dine with the Viceroy of India you present yourself in the reception room in your regulation swallow-tail, but before you go to dinner you change it for a nice; cool, white linen jacket.

a nice, cool, white linen jacket.
During the recent warlike excitement in Panama and Colon prices of provisions went to a high figure, and thousands of country people rushed in to profit by the rise. This sent prices down to what the Star and Herald says is the lowest they have been in several years. Here is a sample of the "low" prices as quoted by that paper: Chickens, 80 cents; turkeys, $2.50; ducks, $2; potatoes, $1.20; eggs, 72 cents.

South Carolina to Northern markets is fixed by a. special melon committee com-posed of all the freight agents of railroads interested in the melon traffic. This year the rate to the Ohio River is one cent per ton per mile, and, when destined beyond, eight mills per ton per mile, a reduction of 20 percent under last year. Both States named are planting largely of the crop.

A prominent New York gen the Attorney-General is that the people cannot amend their Constitution, or if they do a previous act of the executive may render that amendment null and void. Nullification never assumed so rank a form as this. Let us see how this looks in view of the history of the Lawton case, than which none will ever be more favorable to the Attorney-General's interpretation. February 6, 1867, President Johnson issued a pardon to Lawton. By a constitutional amendment which went into effect July 20, 1868, the people declared that persons who stood where Lawton stood should not be eligible to certain things unless Congress by a two-thirds voto of each House removed the disability. Here is the provision (Section 3. Fourteenth Amendment) which applies to Lawton's case and which the Attorney-General brushes aside with the pardon given by the President:

No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or as an officer of the United States, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the Marchael and the proposed and the background by the long-legged young men and nimble-footed young women, the graduates of the dancing women, the graduates of the dancing women, the graduates of the dancing sent proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the marchael and the proposed to support the constitution of the capture of the Legislature could not have contemplated.

This language brings very forcibly to mind the circumstances under which the constitutional provision was proposed and adopted. President Johnson had turned with such vigor the crank of his pardon mill that it seemed he was bound to run through it the whole Confederacy. Unless something were done in the nature of an extended the contemplate of the contemplation of the contemplatio tween him and "the boss?" "No," was the reply. "Well, I will tell you. He works to get an appetite for his dinner, and I to get a dinner for my appetite."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Logan & Ce.'s.

There are very few men whose disabilities have not been removed by Congress. When they have asked they have received. General Lawton does not seem to have desired to be relieved in that way.

An uncommon form of strike is the quitting of pastoral work by the lower clergy of Bulgaria. They refuse to hold church services, baptize, or solemnize marriages and burnis. Their grievance is the very worldly one of a reduction of wages, which are paid them by the Sists.

The banks in the New York Clearing house that bey 2? percent interest have decided to reduce the rate to 2 percent, claiming that they cannot afford to pay more. The marrian deposited by traders on the Produce Exchange are affected by this, and members are trying to combine and prevent the reduction from 2? percent.
